

- The months where traffic injuries occur the most are the months of July and June, where it would normally be assumed that there would be greater injuries in months such as December due to the festivities that occur in said month.
- Regarding the influence of the climatic condition, the influence is little because, as observed, the injuries occur under normal conditions, although in the rainy climatic condition the injuries are few, in this condition more injuries occur than in other seasons. .
- Finally, and as might be expected, there are more injuries on the weekend (Saturday, Sunday) than during part of the week. This could be because people leave their homes more, to go to parties, go out with family, visit. among others and this generates greater traffic transportation
